I am in eleven grade in school. My class is connected with such subjects as literature, history and English language.

I strongly believe that people choose their faith themselves. It is only them who decide who decide how they will live. So, if people want to see the change in the world they should become this change.

I have two reasons to support my opinion. First of all, some people <sup>don't</sup> have a good background but they manage to run away, get a good job, change their lives. It is a first step. This means they also can change something in the world.

For example, a lot of great worldwide famous scientists who discovered a new land or invented something. They became that change, they created something that had changed lives of people. The great Russian author Maksim Gorky was from a poor family, his ~~grand~~ grandfather insulted him and he ran away, trying to start a new life. He became a famous author, he had money.

In conclusion, I want to add that it can seem scary, try something new or think that you can change something so big as the world. But everything is possible. We should do our best and improve, help our world and each other.
