ANSWER SHEET

Hello, my name is Anastasiya, I'm still studying at school and spend most of my time getting ready for exams.

I've been asked to comment a quotation: "I think it's a great quote that speaks about how our feelings after accomplishing a goal depend on it's difficulty. I agree that it's more rewarding to overcome greater obstacles. Firstly, it's because of the way our achievements is seen by society. People who achieve higher goals get a lot of respect and attention most of the time. Secondly, it's because of the effort you put in reaching these goals. Achieving greater highs requires you to spend more personal resources."

I can use my experience as an example. The greatest obstacle I overcame was graduating art school. The studying took eight years before the exam. During which I these years I spent most of my time practising to get better at drawing and used to stay up late to finish my art pieces or study history of arts. All the effort I put in studying and graduating art school made it my most rewarding achievement.

In conclusion, I want to say that the more effort we put in some goals the better we feel about achieving it them. It's also important to learn to respect yourself for your achievements.
