ANSWER SHEET

† "The greater the obstacle, the more glory in overcoming it" is a quote of French poet and playwright Molière. In this short sentence he expressed the law of life: we get more joy from beating up hard challenges, because that's how we prove our worth to ourselves.

(Cor) I agree with Molière's idea. In my opinion, the harder the trouble, the more satisfaction people get after solving them. The first reason to ^{support} ~~prove it~~ it is the fact that a lot of people set up challenges for themselves because they get the thrill after beating them up. The second ^{is} ~~the~~ psychological ^{top} fact: people who prefer to set challenges to themselves are in lower risk of getting depression. Also, they are happier in general.

To prove my point I'll use example from the ~~new~~ Russian novel "Oblomov" written by Turgenev. The main character Oblomov is a lazy man who ~~preten~~ ^{is} preferred to lay down all day long. It is clear that he wasn't setting any goals he wanted to achieve, wasn't testing himself. It ^{an} ~~leaded~~ to awful end: he stayed single and ~~depressed~~. depressed. This negative example shows us how we shouldn't do.

In conclusion, I want to say that it is very important to never give up in troubles, because it can lead to happy and joyful end.
